

雅思口语素材

Part3 完整版

如何使用好我们这份口语素材呢？

第一，先自行过一遍题目，了解题目内容和要求

我们的口语题目都是选自雅思哥 App 的，相对来说是市面上最完整的题库。对于没准备过口语的烤鸭来说，先自行过一遍题目，有利于了解口语是怎么考试的，问题的要求，类别，知根知底才能做到心中有数，考试的时候就不会慌张。如果一上来就盲目得背答案，那效率不会太高的。

第二，看完题目过后先遮住答案自己练习一遍

看完题目了，然后自己对着题目，拿起草稿本和笔，试着把自己脑海中要回答的要点或者思路大致写下来。这个过程要快，不要浪费时间，因为只要有一点点的想法，后期你再准备的时候就可以扩写。口语就怕没话说，哪怕挤牙膏一样挤一点是一点。这样在过一遍全部题库，大致就能标记出哪些话题自己是熟悉的，哪些是没有丁点思路的，然后下面在对没思路的话题多加练习

第三，对照素材，了解思路和素材结构

在这过程中，烤鸭们应该注意 part2 答案。看 part2 时，主要看答案是怎样回应题目中的四个小问题的，是怎样连接的，是怎样回答 why 这个小问题的（因为这往往是 part 中最重要的问题），回答时是持什么样的观点，用了哪些例子，怎么说理。

第四，结合自身情况，理清每个题目的回答思路

做完以上三步，相信大家都多多少少有点印象了，接下来有两条路，

一，是根据自身情况，结合素材的思路，改写素材或者自编一个思路出来，然后多加练习，这也是店主推荐的，毕竟属于自己的东西才是最合适。下面提供一个思路的例子，大家可以参考一下，话题是 需改进的公众场所

二，就是背素材了，时间实在紧张的亲走投无路的话也只能选择这种方式，但得注意一下

(1) 拿到题目，或者考官刚问完问题，亲得慢点来，别激动，别考官都没问完问题你就开始回答

(2) 考试的时候要跟考官有眼神交流，最好加上点手势，身体动作

(3) 回答的时候要注意恰当的停顿，特别注意的是切忌一口气说出一段话，还带从句的。

总而言之，归根到底还是得多看多练习！

写在前面的话

雅思口语素材 Part3 使用须知：

5-8月新题是会在9-12月继续考的题目，9月份的考试的烤鸭先准备这一部分哦

9-12月新题大概会在9月8号左右开始更新，更新的内容还是点开我发给你的百度云链接查看~有什么疑问都可以询问旺旺客服哦！

Part3的回答建议4-6句，或者有话说的可以聊得更多。考官基本上不会在Part3打断Part3的回答时间大概在5分钟左右。也就是说您回答得越多，考官间的问题可能就相对少一点

然后考官会在考试中随机问一些问题，可能跟你的回答有关，也可能是随意问的。这部分没法预测，所以也只能靠临场发挥和平时积累了。

No. 1 广告

1. Why do some people hate advertisements?

There are many people in the world who hate advertisements. In fact, a lot of my friends get very annoyed whenever an advertisement plays on the television or on the radio. Advertisements are annoying because you are not interested in buying the things that they are advertising, which can be very boring. Moreover, many advertisements can be very loud and annoying in an attempt to catch the listener's attention. Therefore, many people find them irritating, especially if the advertisement has interrupted something they were watching. However, not everyone hates advertisements this much. For example, in the western world advertisements have been a common part of life for well over a hundred years. So many people are able to easily ignore advertisements without becoming annoyed by them.

2. Do people usually buy stuff after watching advertisements?

Sometimes advertisements can be really effective and make a lot of people buy stuff after they have seen it. This is because advertisements are often very well made and convincing. Sometimes advertisements can be very persuasive and make decent arguments as to why an individual should purchase what they are trying to sell. Also, sometimes advertisements are advertising products which are very useful or interesting, these definitely make people go out and buy stuff. However, personally I believe that some people are more susceptible (可能) to advertisements than others. I think that young people can be very impressionable and thus advertisements can really impact them. Often young people will go out and buy things that they do not really want or need just because an advert convinced them to buy the product.

3. Is music useful in advertising?

Personally, I believe that music is very useful in advertising. There are many different advantages to using music in advertising campaigns. Firstly, music has a large effect on the mood of an advert. Happy and energetic music can put viewers in a really good mood when they are watching an advertisement, which makes them more likely to buy the product. This is because if an advertisement makes a person feel happy then they will probably presume (假设、认为) that the product will also make them feel happy. Furthermore, if an advert uses well known and popular music then it is likely that a person will make good associations with what the advertisement is trying to sell. This is because if an advertisement has cool and trendy music then people will assume the product is cool and trendy as well. Yet, this is only really effective on people who have good knowledge on modern music. Therefore, I think music can be more useful when advertising to young viewers and less useful when advertising to older generations.

4. What are the advantages of TV advertisements? How about internet advertisements?

TV advertising is the most common and effective form of advertisements. There have been television advertisements for almost as long as there has been television. One of the advantages of TV advertising is that they reach a very large and wide ranging demographic (人口). Almost every house in the modern world will have a television, therefore, TV advertisements are seen by all sorts of different people. Many people like to watch television as a way to relax after work or school. For these people, advertisements have always been a part of watching television, thus, for the most part people watch advertisements complacently (满意的、满足的). However, in contrast to this, many people get very upset about internet advertisements. I have many friends who complain when they are watching a video on the internet and an advertisement plays which they cannot skip. Similarly, many music streaming websites will play advertisements between songs and this frequently irritates people. There is a much different culture on the internet, people expect things immediately and without interruption, therefore I think it is much less effective for advertisements.

1.What do people do online in their free time?

Many people nowadays choose to spend their free time browsing the internet. There are all sorts of different things one can do on the internet. The most popular activity by far has to be visiting social media websites. Social media is a huge part of modern life and many people will spend hours on different social media every day. There is social media for catching up with friends, for sharing your ideas, for posting photographs you have taken online and many other things. I would say that social media is particularly popular with younger generations and also with people that do not have too many responsibilities.

2.What impacts does the internet have on schools?

The internet can have both positive and negative impacts on schools. On one hand there are many ways in which the internet can be used as a resource to improve the quality of teaching within a school. The internet has huge amounts of information as well as many fun and interactive ways to teach facts to students. Therefore, when applied correctly, the internet can be a very effective tool for teaching. However, there are also many ways in which the internet can negatively affect schools. The internet is a very risky source of distraction to many students across the world. Social media and video websites can often distract children from their studies and cause them to lose focus in class.

3.Do you think many people waste their time online?

There are many ways in which the internet poses a large risk of distracting people from their work and studies. Nowadays, with mobile phones most people are always connected to the internet wherever they go. This means that a lot of people waste their time online instead of focusing on important things they have to do. Often during class students will browse through social media on their phones. Similarly many people spend their free time browsing content on the internet when that time could be better spent on self-improvement or socialising. I think this problem is particularly poignant (深刻、尖锐的) amongst people who live in large cities. People in cities often feel very isolated from one another and therefore spend a lot of their time alone on the internet. In contrast to this, people in small villages have a better sense of community and thus would rather spend their time doing interesting activities with friends.

4.What can people do with the internet in the future? And how?

It is very hard to really predict what people will do with the internet in the future. The internet is a rapidly changing social space and its potentialities could be limitless. The internet also offers different tools for different groups of people. For businesses, the internet may become a huge platform for them to connect to their customer bases. There are many companies already using the internet as their primary space to sell products such as Uber or Alibaba. For these companies the internet will probably develop to engage in new and exciting ways with the physical world, commerce and trade. Yet in contrast, the internet will offer very different developments to people who appreciate art and music. The internet is becoming a large cyber gallery for artists to place their artwork and music on display for people to appreciate.

1.What's the differences between outdoor sports and indoor sports?

There are many differences between outdoor sports and indoor sports; each of which have their own advantages and disadvantages. Outdoor sports have many advantages such as being able to play in the sun and fresh air on beautiful days. Furthermore, outdoor sports are often less limited by space than indoor sports which must be constricted (受限制的) to the size of a building or room. However, in contrast to this, indoor sports have many benefits that outdoor sports do not. For example, outdoor sports are not a lot of fun to play in bad weather but indoor sports are never affected by the weather.

2.What kinds of water sports are popular nowadays

There are all sorts of different watersports which are popular nowadays. Watersports are often considered one of the greatest forms of exercise as swimming exercises (动词。锻炼) almost all of the muscle groups (肌肉群) in one's body. Therefore, there are many people who use watersports as a means of staying in shape. However, there is another form of water sport that are becoming very popular nowadays. There are many extreme water sports which people like to play to experience a thrill and an adrenaline rush (肾上腺素). There are so many fast paced water sports such as water skiing, surfing and diving. All of these sports push people to extreme limits but can be very dangerous.

3.Why should we develop water transport?

There are both arguments for and arguments against why we should develop water transport. Some people believe that we should develop water transport because it may be far more ecologically sustainable (生态的可持续发展) than the air transport we are currently reliant (依靠) on as a civilisation. Water transport emits (发出、释放) far less greenhouse gasses than air transport does so it is a far more sustainable form of transport. However, the current issue with it is that water transport is a very slow form of transport compared to flying. Therefore, it would be good if we could develop water transport in the hopes of creating a fast water transport system which is still ecologically friendly. However, there are mixed opinions on this topic. For example, people living in areas such as the Mediterranean (地中海) are very supportive of developing water transport because they live in an area where many countries are connected by water so this would be an effective form of transport. But in contrast, many countries, such as China for example, have huge areas of land in which water transport is not effective. Therefore, it seems like a bad area to invest development when there are places where water transport is impossible.

4.Do you think it is necessary for everyone to learn to swim?

Personally, I believe swimming is a very important skill to learn. Swimming is an excellent form of exercise and swimming also offers many social opportunities when one is on holiday. Therefore, there are many personal advantages to knowing how to swim. Yet the most important reason is that knowing how to swim can be the difference between life and death. Accidents are very common in life and you never know when you may accidentally fall into deep water with no one around to help you. If you do not know how to swim then there may be very little hope that you survive.

1. How can people become famous?

Celebrity culture is becoming a larger and larger part of society in the modern world. There are many different ways that people can become famous. However, most people become famous because they are very talented and interesting people. Most of the time famous people are individuals who the media or the public have become very interested in because of their unique talent. For example often a young person is discovered with amazing singing abilities and they quickly become famous because the public are so amazed by their talent. Different countries have different types of celebrities. For example where I am from some of our most famous celebrities are actors such as Deng Chao from the television show Running Man. Being on television is a very common way for people to become very famous, as millions of people watch television every day.

2. What are the advantages and disadvantages of becoming a celebrity?

I am not sure whether I would like to be a celebrity. Many modern celebrities struggle with protecting their privacy. Everywhere they go people recognise them and the media follow them. I imagine it must be very stressful trying to live your day to day life. However, there are obvious benefits to being a celebrity. Most celebrities become very wealthy due to their fame and live fun and exciting lives as a result. This lifestyle has become something a lot of people desire in the modern world, especially members of the younger generation. Most young people would like to be rich and famous without having to work very hard in life. However, I do not see the appeal in this. I think being a celebrity is stressful and I would prefer to live a quiet life.

3. What influences can famous people have on the society?

Famous people have a lot of influence on society because a lot of people look up to celebrities and respect their opinions. Personally, I do not think this is always a good thing. Celebrities can often have a lot of young people who look up to them, therefore if a celebrity makes a bad decision often many children may copy them without thinking. This is dangerous as it can make it difficult to raise children to be good and well-rounded people if they have bad role models. However, I think that in China celebrities till only have a minor influence on society. This is not true for the rest of the world, in the western world celebrities have a massive impact on very serious issues. For example, celebrities are often used in advertising campaigns for big charities tackling serious issues.

4. Why can some celebrities stay famous for a long time while some cannot?

Fame and popularity are strange things in society and can be very volatile (不稳定). Some celebrities remain famous for a long time while others are forgotten about very quickly. I think this is largely because we live in a very fast paced society where things are always changing and there is always something new to discover. Therefore, to remain famous a celebrity must always be in the media and the public eyes. Therefore, good celebrities will continue to either release popular music, or make new movies or do whatever they are talented at to stay in the public eye. Some celebrities are not able to do this and quickly lose fame after becoming celebrities, these types of people are called one hit wonders because they only had one successful moment. It is my opinion that older generations were not so quick to forget about celebrities.

1. Why do you think some people talk aloud on public transport?

I think there are many different opinions on what is proper etiquette (礼仪) on public transport. There are some people who believe you should be completely silent, some who think it is okay to talk quietly and others who talk very loudly with no regard for other passengers. Personally I believe it is okay to talk quietly with the people next to you, as long as you are not disruptive (制造混乱的) and you are respectful. There are some people in the older generations who believe that people should be silent on public transport but I do not agree with this. Public transport can be very boring and often the journeys are long so it is nice to talk with the people sat next to you. Yet, there are some young people who talk very loudly on public transport. I think this is very rude, as it can be disruptive and annoying.

2. Should people be banned from talking aloud in public places?

I do not think people should be banned from talking aloud in public places. There are many reasons why somebody may need to talk in a public place. There could be urgent news to communicate such as if someone was feeling unwell or if they were in danger. Therefore, it is important that people are allowed to communicate with each other. Also, people may need help from those around them such as when somebody is lost and needs directions. Furthermore, I do not think there is a problem with friends talking quietly to each other in public places.

3. Is it bad to talk on the phone in public places?

There is a lot of debate over whether it is bad for people to talk on the phone in public places. Personally, I have mixed opinions on the issue. I think there are a lot of times when it is valid for people to talk on the phone in public places. Often when out in public you need to make arrangements or plans with friends and colleagues who you are meeting later in the day. Sometimes phone calls are quite important and you may have to make these calls in public places. However, there are some people who have long and loud conversations on the phone in public places which are obnoxious and inappropriate. This is very common amongst young people, often young people will have very loud conversations with their friends on the phone when it would be better for them to meet in person to have the conversation. It can be very loud and distracting to listen to silly conversations in public places.

4. Why do some people always break rules in public places?

I think in general most people try to abide (遵守) by the law at all times, however, there are some people who always break rules in public places. It is hard to understand why people do this. Most people like to be law abiding citizens as this has a positive impact on communities and makes the world a nice place to be. However, there are often recalcitrant (顽固的) individuals who like to break the laws whenever they can. Often this is due to them being brought up badly when they were children. Often people from less privileged (享有特权、高贵的) backgrounds do not learn about laws and societal expectations when they are children. This means that these individuals have issues with authority and often break the rules. In my hometown, these people are rare and usually loners (孤独者).

No. 6 童年让我笑的人

1. What can make children laugh?

It is very easy to make children laugh. When we are young the world seems a very bizarre (奇怪) and humorous place, thus many children find a lot of things to be funny. When I was young, I always laughed really hard at practical jokes (恶作剧). In my hometown, practical jokes are considered as the most humorous form of comedy. When the consequences are minimal (极少的), it is funny to watch foolish behaviour and people being tricked. However, what is considered funny differs from culture to culture. Where I am from practical jokes are considered good comedy but some places do not find them funny. For example, in many parts of the Western world, children are entertained by clowns and scripted comedy (小丑和脚本喜剧).

2. What do you think is the best age for people to have children?

Personally, I believe it is sensible for people to wait until they are mature adults with comfortable jobs before they have children. Having children is an expensive and arduous (艰巨的) experience, therefore it is important that people have the resources necessary to support raising children. This is a somewhat modern opinion, many older generations thought having children at a young age was the best age to have children. Often, people would marry in a young age and have children in their early twenties. This was because family was thought to be the most important thing in life. However, I believe financial security is important to good family life.

3. Do you think people should be trained before they become parents?

I think it is important that people are experienced and wise before they become parents, however, I do not think they need to be formally trained. This is an opinion I think many people in the older generation would agree with. For thousands of years people have raised children without the need of formal training. You learn how to raise children from watching your own parents raise you. Learning how to look after another human being is a part of life we all experience without the need for training. Yet, there are many modern studies which suggest that parenting is far more complex than we once thought. Therefore, there is a growing opinion amongst the younger generations that training should be given before people become parents.

4. Do you think childhood is the most important in one's development?

Childhood is an incredibly important stage in one's development, however, it is not the be all and end all (俚语, 等于“it's not everything”). As a child you learn many important skills. Childhood is the formative years of an individual's social skills, moral compass and intelligence. However, it is my belief that people are always developing. Therefore, even if things were not learnt well in childhood, a person may still develop these skills later in life. Yet, there are many who would disagree with me. In the western world, especially in Europe, psychoanalysis is a popular practice which places huge importance on the formative stages of childhood. Psychoanalysts would believe that childhood is the most important stage in one's development.

1. What kinds of advice do parents give to their children?

Traditionally, parents give their children advices to help prepare them for the adult world. Therefore, the kind of advice they give depends on what is useful for the child in their particular environment. For example, in my hometown parents give their children advice on how to act fairly and communicate well with others. Yet, in Western individualistic (个人主义) countries there is a larger sense of competition between individuals in the adult world. Therefore, parents in the western world tend to give children advice on how to be confident and independent.

2. How do experts give advice to others? (e.g. a doctor gives advice to his patients)

Experts must give advice in a very different manner to how a friend may give advice to another friend. Experts, such as a doctor, must give advice in a professional and objective (客观的) manner. Experts are meant to communicate information clearly and without digression (题外话). In contrast to this, friends may give each other advice using many allegories or metaphors (寓言或隐喻) to strengthen their point and make it more interesting. This would be very inappropriate for an expert and their advice would not seem serious. It is important to convey advice in the most proper and suitable manner.

3. What advice do parents give to teenagers about making friends?

There is a lot of advice that parents can give teenagers about making friends. Most of the advice is to do with being genuine (与真诚有关的) and not pretending to be somebody that you are not. Often a parent will tell a teenager all they need to do is 'be themselves'. This is because you want friends who like you for who you are and not for who you are pretending to be. (这是因为你想要的朋友是真正喜欢你的人，而不是你假装喜欢的人。) However, advice is changing a lot in the modern world. In large cities it is easy for teenagers to fall into the wrong group of people. Therefore, nowadays, a lot of parents' advice is about avoiding dangerous people and bad influences.

4. Whose advice is more helpful? Parents' or friends'?

There are mixed opinions on whose advice is more helpful. For older generations it was always believed that there is no better advice than what comes from your family and especially your parents. Your parents have a wealth of life experience which means they can give very good and well informed advice. Yet, nowadays, some people disagree with this opinion. Due to the rapidly changing nature of the modern world, your friends can often give you better advice than your parents.

No. 8 交通工具出故障

1. Who like to travel more? Older people or younger people?

There is no conclusive (决定性的、确定的) answer for who likes to travel more between older people and younger people. Many older people love to travel as they have reached their retirement. Therefore, they have a lot of free time and have earnt the money to do a lot of travelling. However, young people are often energetic and adventurous and they will travel even if they do not have a lot of money. It is very common for young people to travel very far with only a little bit of money and a backpack (背包). Therefore, I think both older people and younger people love to travel.

2. Are there fewer people using private cars because of improved public transport?

I think it is true to say that there are fewer people using private cars because of improved public transport but this is not the only reason. Improvements to public transport definitely increase its use as many people are deterred from (阻止) using bad public transport. If a transport system is inefficient then people cannot rely on it. However, I think many people turn to public transport for other reasons as well, some environmental and some economic. For example, even with an improved public transport system many people will still use private cars because they are wealthy enough to do so.

3. What do you think needs to be improved in public transport?

I think there are many improvements which need to be made to public transport around the world. In general, all public transport needs to become more environmentally friendly if it is to be sustainable (可持续的) in the future. Yet locally (在本地) there are also improvements to be made. In many parts of the western world the public transport system is very inefficient and unreliable, so that needs to be improved. But in my hometown, the transport system is efficient, but it does struggle with the large population size of my city. Therefore, transport system in my hometown needs to be improved so that it can carry a larger capacity of passengers.

4. What are the advantages and disadvantages of private transport?

There are a few disadvantages to private transport but for some people the advantages far outweigh them. Private transport is both costly and environmentally unfriendly. Public transport splits (分推) the cost of travel between all the passengers and reduces fuel emissions by transporting many people at one time. However, certain people, such as the old or disabled, may find public transport to be very uncomfortable and difficult to use. Therefore, private transport offers them many advantages such as independence and comfort. Furthermore, private transport offers the individual greater control over their journey. One is not limited by a certain schedule or route.

1. Why is it important for teenagers to set goals?

It is very important for teenagers to set goals to that they are successful in life. Goals help a person set themselves reasonable challenges and encourage people to progress in life. In the modern world there are many distractions which can prevent teenagers from reaching their full potential. Therefore, setting goals is a good way for teenagers to stay determined and develop as individuals. In my opinion, it was far more common for teenagers in the older generations to set goals and achieve them. Nowadays, many people are lazy and despondent, thus they lack the determination to set goals and challenge themselves.

2.What will encourage children to learn more?

There are many different forms of encouragement which can motivate a child to learn more. The best form of encouragement is for the family to create a healthy learning environment at home, one that encourages intellectual pursuit. However, some children require a bit more encouragement than others. For these children it can be positive to use incentives such as playing games or rewarding a child with their favourite food when they work well. I think it is becoming more common for people in the younger generations to find ways of making learning fun for children.

3.Do parents and teachers punish children physically nowadays?

It is becoming much rarer for parents to punish children physically nowadays. For older generations this was a normal way of disciplining children. However, recent studies have demonstrated that physical punishment is not an effective means of discipline and often it can do more harm than it does good. In the modern world most schools avoid physical punishment and it is becoming less common for parents as well. It is better to try and communicate with children and explain why their actions were bad. This leads to better developed children than ones who are physically punished.

4.Who do you think has the greater influence on the goal-setting of children? Teachers or parents?

The best form of encouragement for children to set goals comes from their parents. If a child is raised in a loving and nurturing environment which praises development and intellectual pursuit then that child will naturally want to learn more. It is the responsibility of the parents to create children who want to challenge themselves and set goals. However, many people now believe that teachers can have a greater influence on children. Teachers hold a natural position of authority and guidance which gives them an advantage on influencing children to be good goal-setters. However, I still believe that parents have the greatest influence.

1.What kind of people usually get up early? And why?

All sorts of different people get up early for quite a few different reasons. Children and young teenagers must wake up early to get to school on time. Similarly, many adults have to wake up very early to commute to work. Depending on the job some adults wake up between 6am and 8am but there are certain jobs where people must wake up even earlier. In contrast to this, many retired elderly people still wake up early. Some people just enjoy being awake in the early morning, to watch the sun rise and experience the fresh air.

2.Is it easier for older people to get up early than young people?

Personally I believe it is easier for older people to get up early than young people. Children begin life waking up very early in the morning but after about the age of four or five they enter the developmental stage of their growth and require lots of sleep. Therefore, children and teenagers often find it very difficult to wake up in the mornings as they need their rest. In contrast to this, adults require far less sleep than children do. Furthermore, they have had their entire lives to adjust to waking up early for work, therefore waking up early comes naturally to older people.

3.What are the benefits of getting up early?

There are many benefits to getting up early. There have been many studies which show that waking up early improves an individual's energy levels throughout the day, even though this may seem counter intuitive (违反直觉的). Waking up early has also been proven to have positive effects on improved mood and greater happiness in people. Furthermore, people who wake up early are normally more productive and better adjusted individuals. However, there are some people who would disagree with me. Many people find that waking up early leaves them tired throughout the day and very unproductive.

4.What effect does sleeping in late have on a person's life patterns?

Sleeping late can have very adverse (不良) effects on a person's life pattern (模式). We all develop natural routines in our day to day life and small changes can have large effects on these. If somebody starts sleeping much later in the day then they may lack their usual energy and enthusiasm. This will make them less productive and could potentially even decrease their mood which can lead to depression. Therefore it is very important that one has a regular and sensible sleeping pattern. However, occasionally there are people called 'night owls (夜猫子)' for whom the inverse (逆、相反) is true. These people feel most productive during the night and therefore sleeping late can have positive effects for them.

1.Is learning a foreign language important?

Learning a foreign language is very important. There are so many advantages one can gain from learning a foreign language. Not only does it improve one's ability to communicate with foreign people, it also trains important parts of the brain and therefore increases one's intelligence. Nowadays it is becoming more and more important to learn a foreign language as the world is far more connected globally. Older generations did not feel it was as important because countries seemed more divided than they are today, one could go there whole lives comfortably only speaking their own language.

2.What benefits can a foreign language bring to one's career?

There are so many benefits a foreign language brings to one's career. In the modern world, more and more careers are based on an international scale (规模). It is becoming more important to employers that prospective (潜在的) employees are able to communicate with one, if not many, foreign countries. Speaking a foreign language allows one to access new and better careers that may be otherwise inaccessible. However, this is not true of all careers. There are still many good and important careers that occur on a national scale, and the need for a foreign language is not important.

3. Do you think English will be the mainstream language of the world in the future?

There are many people who believe that English will be the mainstream (主流) language of the world in the future, however, I am not so convinced. Currently, English is one of the most commonly spoken languages in the world and many western people believe it will become the mainstream language of the future. However, the English language gained its prevalence (流行) due to the economic strength of English speaking countries. As more countries with foreign languages enter the global economic field their languages gain a global importance. Therefore, the South American economy makes Spanish a very useful language to learn and the same could be said for Cantonese in China.

4. When learning a foreign language, which part is easier? Speaking or writing?

People learn in different methods and thus find some parts of learning a foreign language easier than others. There are some people who believe that learning to speak is the easiest part and others who think it is learning to write. Personally, I think it depends on the context. For example, if you are living in a place where you are surrounded by people who speak the foreign language you are trying to learn then speaking will be easier than writing. This is because you spend so much time listening to conversations in the foreign language that speaking the language comes naturally to you. In contrast, somebody learning a language alone, with no one to speak to, will find the writing part much easier to learn.

1. What kind of music do people like at different ages?

When it comes to music preference there are many different tastes, however, there is also a big difference between what kind of music people like at different ages. In my opinion, when it comes to popular music, people like the music that they grew up with. Therefore, people who were teenagers in the 60s will like music from the 60s for most of their life. In contrast, someone younger who grew up in the 90s will not care for the music of the 60s. Yet, this is only true with popular music, when it comes to niche music (小众音乐) types things are quite different. For example when young people may love rap and dance music because of its upbeat (乐观向上) energy. In contrast, when they become older they may develop an appreciation of classical music and jazz for its intricate (错综复杂) detail.

2. What kind of music is popular in China now and what kind will be in the future?

There is a range of music that is popular in China at the moment. Obviously there is a large following of mainstream global music, a lot of which is from the Western world, yet there is a booming and vibrant Chinese music industry. Recently a lot of young people have become very interested in a music genre called K-Pop, originating from South Korea. This is very energetic pop music, usually accompanied by complex (复杂的) dancing and charismatic band members. In response to this some believe that China is producing its own form of this pop music, coined (创造了) C-Pop. This is the music that is very popular with young people at the moment, however I think it will change. In the 1980s Chinese rock music was extremely popular with young people, nobody would have predicted the change to pop music. Therefore, I do not think we can ever predict the future of music.

3. Do people learn to sing nowadays?

I think a lot of people learn to sing nowadays, but not like they did before. People in the older generations learnt to sing for different reasons. Singing was a community activity, something you did at festivals and special occasions. Therefore, people would learn how to sing by singing with people in their community. However, in the modern world the attitude towards singing is very different. Singing has become a very lucrative (赚钱的) career. So, people now go to private vocal (声乐) coaching to improve their singing. Singing is now learnt meticulously (精心、细致) and is done so for private reasons. Regardless of the context, singing has always played a large part in cultural history, so people will always be learning how to sing.

4. Do you think the most popular singer is the best one?

In most instances the most popular singer is the best one. For professional singers their celebrity and fame is the direct result of their singing talent. Therefore, the better one is at singing the more popular they become in society. However, this is not always true. In the modern world people can gain popularity for many things which sometimes have nothing to do with talent. In modern celebrity culture many of the most popular singers are popular because of their personality and charisma (个性和魅力), not because of their talent.

1. Do Chinese people like to visit historical buildings?

Chinese people really enjoy visiting historical buildings. I think this may have to do with the wealth of historical buildings we have in China. We not only have one of the most famous historical landmarks in the world, the Great Wall, but we also have one of the most beautiful and intricate (错综复杂的) historical sites, the Forbidden Palace. Therefore, living in a place with such fantastic historical buildings breeds (孕育) a love for visiting them. However, I suspect this is becoming less true for young people. It seems to me that young people are becoming less interested in history, they only care about what is new and modern.

2. Why do people visit historical buildings?

There are many reasons why people visit historical buildings. Historical buildings are areas of great historical beauty. Usually the architecture of historical buildings are incredibly impressive, which is one of the reasons they remained preserved through history. Furthermore, historical buildings tell stories of huge importance. Usually historical buildings are linked to influential periods and moments in history. It is for this reason that many older people like to visit historical buildings because they often have a deep appreciation for ancient history.

3. Is it necessary to protect historical buildings?

Personally, I believe it is completely necessary to protect historical buildings. Historical buildings are a national treasure and should be protected and conserved at all costs. They are very important to a nation's cultural history and often the building may have had a significant role in a country's history. Furthermore, historical buildings often bring lots of money to a country through tourism, therefore they are worth the investment. I believe in China we have a great respect for our historical buildings.

so this is a common opinion, however, there are many countries in the western world which do not think it is necessary to protect historical buildings. To them it is a waste of money.

4.Do most people agree to the government's funding to protect historical building?

I think most people agree to the government's funding to protect historical buildings. To most people in China, our historical buildings are very important to us and we would like to treat them with respect. Obviously, it is not cheap to protect and restore historical buildings, therefore government funding is absolutely necessary to their protection. Personally, I think this is a fine use of taxes. However, there are a few people who would argue that there are more important things on which to spend tax payer money. For example, better education and healthcare have a larger effect on most of the population than the protection of historical buildings.

1.Do people nowadays help others more than in the past?

I do not think people nowadays help others more than in the past. It is my opinion that in the past, because we lived in smaller communities, people helped each other more frequently. Communities were closer and people knew each other better, therefore, people were more eager to give each other assistance. In the modern world more and more people are living in large urban cities where there is less sense of a community. Therefore, often we feel our neighbours are strangers and we are less inclined to help each other. However, this is not true of everyone, there are still many kind people who help others no matter where they live.

2.Who should teach children to help others? Parents or teachers?

I would argue that it is the responsibility of both the parents and the teachers to teach children it is good to help others. Helping others is fundamental to the construction of a good and healthy society. In my opinion both parents and teachers have huge influence on children. Therefore, they both have the potential to impart this skill on children and thus it is their responsibility to do so. However, there are some who may disagree with me and be of the opinion that it is not the teacher's responsibility. Some people believe that a teacher should only teach formal education, and social skills are the responsibility of parents.

3.In what kinds of professions do people help others more?

There are many professions which are based around the idea of helping other people. This is especially true for social services such as doctors, the fire department and the police. These professions exist for the protection and assistance of society. Therefore, I believe these are the kinds of professions which help people the most. However, many young people these days feel like they have been affected more by influential celebrities such as movie stars or pop singers. For these people, the messages and morals found in the art work of these professions have a profound influence on society. Therefore, it is true to say that different kinds of professions can help people in vastly different ways.

4.Why are some people willing to help others?

Some people are definitely more willing to help those around them than other people, and there are a few different reasons for this. Some would argue that some people have an innately more helpful nature, and naturally feel inclined to help others more. Personally, I believe it is more influenced by upbringing. People who were taught that it is good and proper to help others will be more willing to do so. It is for this reason that I believe older people are more willing to help others than younger people. I feel that it was more important to be helpful for older generations and therefore they raised their children to be helpful people.

1. Who should people spend more time with? Family or friends?

Personally I believe it is very important to spend time with one's family. Your family are with you for your entire life so it is important to develop a strong and close relationship with your family. Family should be the people you can count on at any moment in life, whether good or bad. I believe this was the accepted norm for people in the older generation, a good family relationship is always of high value for older people. However, many young people today value their friendships over their family and believe they should spend more time with their friends.

2. What's the difference between staying with friends and staying with family?

Personally I believe it is much nicer to stay with your family than it is to stay with your friends. Personally, I think that when one stays with their family they are instantly accepted as a natural member of the household. Thus, the experience is comfortable and you can easily relax when staying with family. However, when staying with friends you are often treated as a guest, which although being kind and polite, often means it is harder to relax. However, this may not be the case for all people. There are many people who may have quite informal friendships and for them it is just like staying with family.

3. Do people prefer being with a large group of people or with a few friends?

Some people prefer being with a large group of people but in my opinion I would rather be with a few friends. I think the difference of opinion comes down to whether you are an introvert or an extrovert. As an introvert I would rather be with a few friends as I feel it is less stressful. Large groups of people can often be overwhelming and chaotic so I do not find it enjoyable. However, a lot of people would disagree, there are some who value having lots of friends and large groups of people around them. This is a particularly common mindset in the western world, but personally I prefer being with a few friends.

4. Do science and technology improve the relationship between people?

Science and technology offer many ways to improve relationships between people. Technology has been assisting human relationships for hundreds if not thousands of years. Recently developments such as mobile phones allow people to verbally communicate with each other all over the world. However, even more primitive technologies such as transport as ancient as the horse and carriage were things which helped connect communities and improve the relationships between people. However, there are some people who believe modern technology is having an adverse effect and worsening the relationships between people.

1.What are the benefits that a park can bring to a city?

There are many benefits that a park can bring to a city. Parks are places where people are able to escape the grey and dreary environment of the city. It is important to have green spaces in a city and it has been proven to have very beneficial effects for a person's mental health. Also, parks are very important spaces for the elderly as they are social environments where they can meet friends and have conversations. However, many young professionals do not care whether there are parks in the city, as their lives are too busy and complex for them to appreciate simple things like parks.

2.Should people help clean public gardens?

I would argue that it is the social responsibility of all people to help clean public gardens. Public gardens are a shared social space which is free for all people to enjoy. Therefore, it is our shared responsibility to keep the spaces clean and well looked after so that they are in a good condition for everyone to enjoy. However, there are some people who would argue that it is the government's responsibility to keep public gardens clean. For them the government should hire people to look after the gardens and keep them clean. However, I think if we all helped out a little bit then this would not be necessary.

3.Do young people go to the park very often?

I think some young people go to the park very often while others do not. A lot of young people like going to the park because parks are idyllic and beautiful places where you can spend time with your friends. I think young people who live in small towns and villages really appreciate parks. For them, parks are an important space for communities to mingle and relax. However, young people who live in cities care less for parks. There lots of places young people prefer to hang out in cities, such as shopping centres and cinemas, that they do not go to the park very often.

4.Why do some people plant flowers at home?

Many people like to plant flowers at home so that they can experience nature where they live. It is very nice to have houseplants and flowers in one's home as it makes your home environment feel fresh. It is very common for people who live in the city to plant flowers at home. This is because in the cities not many wild flowers grow naturally so it is rare to see them when walking about. In contrast, fewer people who live in the countryside plant flowers at home because they are so abundant in the fields and therefore they see flowers whenever they leave home.

1.What's the difference between the dressing style of young people and that of old people?

There is quite a large difference between the dressing style of young people and that of old people. Old people are often more sensible with their dressing style. Old people will wear clothes that are functional and suitable to their environment. For example, they will dress in thick and warm clothes during the winter. Old people care less about style and instead dress in a respectful and sensible manner. In contrast to this, most young people dictate their dress style by what is fashionable. Therefore, young people will wear the latest and trendiest clothes regardless if they are sensible for the weather or not.

2.Do the people living in south China(warmer) wear difference clothes from the people living in the north(colder)?

There is a dramatic difference between the types of clothes people wear living in the south of China and those worn by people living in the north of China. China is a very large country and therefore there are quite large environmental differences between the north and the south. The north of China can be very cold and the south of China can be very warm, and thus the dressing style between the regions is very different. In the north people normally wear much warmer clothing that protects them from the cold weather. In the south of China, people do not have to worry about the cold so they wear a variety of light and breezy clothing.

3.Do you think students like to wear uniforms?

I think there are mixed opinions on whether students like to wear uniforms. Some students do not like to wear uniforms as they think choosing their own clothing is a fun way for them to express themselves. This is a very common opinion in very individualistic countries such as the United States of America where individual expression is culturally very important. However, some students would rather wear uniforms as they find the idea of choosing their own clothing every day to be stressful and distracting from their education. Having a uniform allows students to come into school and study without having to worry about what clothes they are going to wear.

4.When do people wear formal clothes?

There are many different occasions on which people wear formal clothes. There are many professions which require people to wear formal clothes. For example, businessmen are expected to dress nicely in formal suits, as are some civil servants and politicians. People may also wear formal clothes for certain special occasions such as weddings or funerals. These are occasions where people want to show their respect so it is important to wear formal clothes. For older people, often wearing formal clothes on a day to day basis was quite normal. However, nowadays people only wear formal clothes for special occasions or certain reasons.

I think many people like to travel abroad to escape the lives they live and experience new things. Often when travelling, people will visit far away countries with very different cultures. Thus, they experience ways of life that they would never be able to experience where they live. Travelling abroad also gives people a break from their regular lives. This is when they spend their holiday on a luxury ship which will travel the seas visiting wonderful and beautiful places. It is a very relaxing and idyllic way to spend a long holiday which is why it is favoured by the elderly. In contrast, young people are more adventurous on their long holidays. Often young people will travel to many exotic countries with little more than a backpack. They go from country to country with no direct aims or intentions, they go just to experience the city.

4.Do you think there will be more ecotourism in the future?

Ecotourism is a rapidly growing industry which appears to have a bright future. Due to climate change, and other ecological crises, many environments are under threat. Ecotourism is a great way for people to invest money into efforts which conserve and protect environments which are in danger. This form of holiday is becoming particularly popular within the younger generations. Young people are very concerned with climate change and the state of the environment, therefore, ecotourism is very common among them. However, many older people still prefer traditional methods of tourism such as cruises and package holidays.

1.What souvenirs would people buy from tourist attractions?

There are many different types of souvenirs that people buy when they are on holiday at tourist attractions. When my mother goes on holiday she likes to buy exotic foods and local delicacies. I think this is a common souvenir to buy for women when they go on holiday. Food items make lovely souvenirs to share with friends and family when you arrive home from your holiday. However, men often prefer to buy permanent souvenirs to take home which are not perishable as food is. Thus, jewellery, artwork and little trinkets bought at markets also make popular souvenirs.

2.Why do people like to take photos when travelling?

Often small countries can become dependent on tourism to support their economies, which can be very unstable and ultimately have negative consequences.

4.What are the pros and cons of taking professional cameras when travelling?

Professional cameras are becoming much more common for average people to use when travelling. Professional cameras allow people to capture beautiful and significant moments during their travels with the utmost quality. It can be a great shame when you take many photos while travelling but once at home you discover they are all blurry and low quality. Therefore, many people take professional cameras when travelling. However, it does come as a great risk travelling with a professional camera. Professional cameras are very expensive which can make you a target for thieves. Therefore, it can be quite dangerous travelling with conspicuous expensive items.

1.What reward can children get from school?

There are many different achievements and awards that children can get from school. There are awards for academic achievement which are awarded to children who demonstrate exceptional talent and aptitude in their studies. There are also awards for attendance and punctuality which reward children for the effort and dedication to their studies. On special occasions students may also be given prizes for participation in talent competitions such as singing and dance. Children are rewarded moderately in schools in China however, there are many western schools which use awards daily to motivate their students. Personally I think this is excessive.

2.Should parents push their children to get prizes?

I do not think it is important for parents to push their children to get prizes. I think prizes can distract a child from their studies and apply unneeded pressure upon them. It would be better for parents to push their children to get good grades and focus on their studies. Education should be exciting and enjoyable for children, however, if they are pushed to focus on prizes it can be stressful and unenjoyable. However, there are many families for which good grades are not enough and they want their child to achieve prizes as well. This is a common belief among strict and conservative families.

3.Is it good for children to compete for prizes at school?

I do not think that it is good for children to compete for prizes at school. Prizes should be awarded to children who do well as a personal token of appreciation for their hard work. Prizes should not be things for which children compete against each other. It is better to encourage children to work hard for their own sakes and not to be awarded as better than their peers. Yet, many people would disagree with me. People from western countries with individualistic attitudes believe that competition between people is good and healthy. Therefore, these people believe that it is good for children to compete for prizes.

4.What kinds of rewards can companies offer to their outstanding employees?

A very common gift to outstanding employees is a very fine and expensive pen. This is often a gift given to employees that are entering retirement. In contrast to this, companies sometimes reward all their employees at once by hosting a staff party where everyone can have fun and enjoy themselves.

It can be difficult to know whether we can trust all of the information we receive therefore it is important to check whether a piece of information is correct or not. For older generations this was often a long and arduous process that would require visiting the library to research the information. It is much easier for young people to check information nowadays as they can search the internet on their phones. The internet has a wealth of information on almost every topic imaginable, therefore it is a very useful resource for checking the validity of one's facts.

4.Do people trust the information online?

Many people trust the information that they find online but I am not sure if this is a wise thing to do. There are a lot of people who will read facts and news headlines on the internet and will believe what they read without a second thought. However, the internet is not a well-regulated space and therefore a lot of news and facts are on the internet which are not credible. Young people are particularly gullible to information they read online, in contrast, older people are more sceptical about the news they research. I think it is good to be sceptical when looking for information online.

1.Do you think it is possible that everyone will eat at restaurants instead of at home in the future?

I think it is unlikely that everyone will eat at restaurants instead of at home in the future. Although young people are less skilled in cooking and it is becoming quite affordable to eat at restaurants nowadays, I still think it is unlikely that everyone will eat at restaurants. In certain parts of the world, such as Europe and the west, the price of food in restaurants is very expensive and rises every year. Therefore, it is not economically viable to eat at restaurants instead of meals every day. There is also a lot of joy that can be gained from cooking your own meals, so many people prefer to eat at home instead of at restaurants.

2.What are the advantages and disadvantages of eating at restaurants?

It is always a lovely experience to go out and eat at restaurants. There are many lovely aspects to eating at restaurants. The food is professionally cooked so is often extremely delicious and enjoyable. A further advantage is that you do not have to spend time or energy cooking and cleaning. However, eating out at restaurants can be very expensive therefore it is not something that could be done every day. When people have special dietary requirements it can be much easier to eat at home than at a restaurant.

Most Chinese people usually eat at restaurants or at street food vendors but it depends on the meal. Breakfast is normally eaten at home as breakfast is a simple and easy meal to prepare. However, street food is very cheap in China, especially in small towns, therefore, it is very affordable to eat out for most meals. Therefore, Chinese people will commonly get their lunch and dinner from affordable food stalls and restaurants. Furthermore, on special occasions Chinese people often like to celebrate by going to fine restaurants. Therefore, Chinese people usually eat out at restaurants. However, there are certain households where home cooking is very important, so for some people it is more usual to eat at home.

1. What do old people in your country do to stay healthy?

It is very important for people to stay healthy, especially the elderly. Often elderly people struggle to stay healthy as their body are fraiser and at a higher risk of damage than a younger person's body is. Therefore, many old people engage in sports which are specially tailored to be less physically exhausting. For example, it is very common for older people to engage in water based exercises such as swimming or water aerobics as these are less taxing on the body. However, there are some older people who are very robust and engage in similar exercises as young people. This is particularly common in rural areas where people often play competitive team sports, such as football, well into their old age. Overall, any exercise which older people are able to do is very good and important for them to stay fit and healthy.

2. How do you deal with pressure?

It is very important to find effective and healthy ways to deal with pressure in life. When one does not deal with pressure effectively this can lead to high levels of stress which is often detrimental to a person's health. Personally, I like to deal with pressure through the use of clear and effective organisation. When I have many jobs and responsibilities to attend to, and the pressure is building up, I like to write lists of the tasks which I have to complete. The lists put all my life pressures into smaller manageable tasks which I can tackle one by one. Therefore, the pressures in my life do not feel so overwhelming and thus do not become stressful. People in the older generation often use similar techniques and are generally very good at dealing with pressure. In contrast, often young people are quite inexperienced and therefore are not very good at dealing with pressure.

3. Why do some people hate playing sports?

There are many people who hate playing sports, and this can be for a number of reasons. There are certain people who are not very athletic and therefore find playing sports to be exhausting. This is particularly true within the older generation, many of whom would much rather not participate in any sports. However, there are many young people who also hate playing sports. Young people often hate playing sports due to the competitive nature of sports in general. Many sports pitch one person against another, or one team against another. Therefore, people are judged for their skills and abilities. Many people do not enjoy being judged or compared to their peers and for this reason they hate playing sports. Finally, there are also many people who think playing sports is quite boring. We each have our own tastes and ideas about what is fun and for some people playing sports is not fun at all.

经常坐飞机的人（9-12月新题）

1. What are the advantages of traveling by plane?

There are several advantages of traveling by plane. The most obvious advantages are the ability to travel great distances in a shorter period of time, the convenience, and that traveling by plane is the safest way to travel! Plane travel allows people to maximize their time at their destination because they are spending less time in transit. A flight between Beijing and Guangzhou is only about three and half hours compared to over 20 hours when driving by car. Also, air travel is considerably safer than driving and is considered the safest means of transportation. Traveling by plane is fast, convenient and safe.

2. Why do some people prefer to travel by train?

Many people prefer to travel by train. To begin with, it is much less expensive to travel by train than other modes of transportation and it is more comfortable. This is important when traveling with a family. If the destination is not a great distance away, it may actually be faster and more convenient to go by train! Also, passengers can see the beautiful countryside and, for longer trips, buy sleeping accommodations so they can arrive refreshed. Finally, compared to travel by air, people have much more freedom to move around. For instance, they can get up to walk to the dining car for something to eat. There are many reasons to prefer traveling by train.

3. What are the disadvantages of living near an airport?

I think the main disadvantages of living near an airport are the noise and air pollution. Airplanes are noisy and this noise is very disruptive. If people live near a large airport, they can expect to hear noise 24 hours a day. Not only can this noise be disruptive during the day, but it can interfere with sleep. Of course, the sound of airplanes is louder outside and that may limit people's desire to enjoy outdoor recreation. In addition to the noise pollution outdoors, the air quality may be negatively affected and that can be unhealthy. When considering the noise and poorer air quality, I would definitely prefer not to live near an airport.

4. How is working at the airport different from working in other places?

Airports are unique because of their strict schedules. Employees need to place a high emphasis on customer satisfaction even though they are working under the pressure of constant deadlines. Every step of the flight process must be strictly, and politely, monitored so that these schedules are met. This includes everything from check in, checking luggage, gate operations, boarding, and deplaning. And all of this must be done while ensuring customers are happy with their experience. This becomes complicated when things happen outside of an employee's control, like severe weather that causes flight delays. Then employees are dealing with large numbers of upset customers. This is very stressful and exhausting. Very few industries have the pressure to maintain schedules as closely as airports and employees have to do it with a smile no matter how tired they are!

初见某人的时刻（9-12月新题）

1. Do you think it is strange to make friends online?

I don't think it is strange at all to make friends online! I can meet people with common interests and communicate conveniently through social media. While it is important to be careful sharing information when developing friendships online, I have met many people who have similar interests by participating in forums dedicated to my interests. For instance, I enjoy photography and have received excellent advice on where to buy quality equipment inexpensively from an online friend. Another thing I especially like about meeting people online is that we can communicate through social media. It makes communication more relaxed because we can "talk" on our own schedule without lengthy time obligations. I definitely count my online friends as my friends.

2. Why do some people have few friends?

Some people have only a few friends because they feel true friendships take time to nurture and develop. For instance, I have many acquaintances, but only a few close friends. I consider a friend to be someone I have known for a while and can confide in. In my mind, it takes time and many interactions to grow from being an acquaintance into a trusted friend. That is why some of my friends are people I have known since elementary school, while other friendships I have developed more recently with people who I have spent more time with. When I go out with a group of people, I am friendly with everyone, but only a few are truly my friends.

3. Which is more important, new friendships or old ones?

Although I think both old and new friendships are special, I think new ones may be more important. People's interests, stage of life, and even where they live can change. I have great memories of my childhood friend, Laura, and we remain in touch through social media. When I go home, I will be sure to visit with her. However, now that I have graduated and started my new job in a new city, I am meeting friends through work and am spending time with them. I have also met people in my building. I think it is only natural to develop new friendships as our life circumstances change. While I can maintain contact with old friends, sometimes it makes more sense to put time and energy into new friendships.

4. How do companies welcome their new employees?

To begin with, usually on the first day, new employees will be given a tour of the department and building by a supervisor and will be introduced to their colleagues. Companies want to welcome their new employees because they hope they will have a long and successful business association together. Secondly, when companies hire new employees, there often is an orientation meeting which allows the company to give new employees important information about policies and procedures. This orientation also allows the new employees to meet each other if they work in different departments. Lastly, frequently supervisors will invite the new employees to dinner so they can get to know each other better. These are all ways to make new employees feel welcome.

多彩的地方（9-12月新题）

1. Is color important for clothing?

Color is very important for clothing and is vital to learn about. It is especially important to dress in appropriate colors for specific occasions. Also, colors mean different things in different cultures. For instance, if you are invited to a wedding in the United States, the bride wears white as it is the color of purity. If a guest wears all white, it is considered rude. While in China, the black is associated with mourning and would never be appropriate to wear for anyone to wear at a wedding. Moreover, appropriate colors are also important in business. You have to dress appropriately for interviews and meeting clients because you will be judged on this first impression. Generally, muted colors are best as those are more accepted in the workplace. Color choice in clothing says a lot about an individual.

2. Should coursebooks be colorful?

Absolutely. Colorful coursebooks create interest compared to a text book that is printed only in black and white. While this would make the cost to produce the coursebook more expensive, not to mention the price to purchase it, it would make the book so much more readable. Firstly, charts and illustrations can be highlighted with color to point out the significant points more clearly. Color contrast can also be used to show comparative information and exceptions more clearly. Secondly, photographs stand out and look so much more real in color than if they are printed in gray-scale. These are the differences that can make a coursebook more interesting to read and easier to understand.

3. What color do you think people would choose when decorating their houses?

Color selections for someone's home is a very individual choice because it sets the mood they want for each room. Personally, I tend to like neutral colors that represent wood, earth, and water tones for wall colors. Also, these wall tones don't clash with each other as you walk from room to room. I feel these neutral colors can easily be accented with brighter colors to make a room look more complete. Color can be added through curtains, pillows, and wall hangings to create the desired mood. Also, these items can also be easily changed to create a different look without having to change the wall color. However, like I said at the beginning, color is a very individual choice!

4. Do you think the color of a company's dress code represents the image of the corporation?

The management of a company puts time and money into developing the company dress code in order to express their desired image. The company is trying to project the principles and standards of their company through color. They want their customers and vendors to have trust and confidence in their business product and the company as a whole. Also, when everyone follows the dress code, it shows people outside of the company that the employees feel united and loyal. Besides, the color of a company's dress code may be different depending on the type of corporation. A conservative accounting business would most probably have a conservative gray color to display confidence whereas a food corporation might have green to represent freshness. Color definitely represents the image of the company!

童年学校（9-12月新题）

1. What is the difference between current teachers and those in the past?

While both current and past teachers have always wanted what is best for their students, I think today's teachers pay more attention to the comprehensive development of students. Current teachers definitely focus on academics, but they also try to help students cultivate a variety of interests and hobbies to make the student more well-rounded, and hopefully a happier and healthier person. The emphasis in the past was solely on a student's academic performance. Teachers in the past were more concerned with forcing students to complete their assignments and even punishing those who did not by corporal punishment. Today's teachers have a more holistic view of each student than teachers in the past.

2. What is the difference between being taught by teachers and by AI

I think the main difference is that teachers can provide human interaction to students. A good teacher is able to recognize when a student is struggling when learning before the student becomes frustrated. Students know that a person is there to help them with the learning process and acknowledge them when they succeed! However, if students are being taught by AI, they may not have the opportunity to tell the AI what they really need or get answers to their questions. What's more, another difference between them may be the quality of the teacher vs. the AI. Although there are many teachers in our country, there are not always enough good teachers. An AI may also be a good option if there is a shortage of teachers in a specific subject area. Moreover, AI may be a way for motivated students with aptitude in the subject area to learn at his or her own pace.

3. What is the difference between private schools and public schools?

There are many differences between private and public schools. First, private schools generally have smaller class sizes and a more rigorous curriculum than public schools. Sometimes this curriculum is focused on a specific subject area, like languages, mathematics, or the arts. Secondly, private schools are very expensive with high tuition rates; not all of the families in China can afford them. So, the private school is also called the ‘exclusive school’ in China. Lastly, since public schools are generally larger than private schools, there is often a larger variety of activities that students can be involved in after school.

4. What is the difference between international schools and other schools?

There are many differences between international schools and other schools in China. To begin with, International schools are mainly attended by foreign students and have more emphasis on the study of English. Also, they usually follow the same curriculum as schools in the United States or Great Britain. Subjects like social studies are presented from a global perspective and are often integrated with other subjects like science, etc. On the other hand, regular schools generally teach Chinese students in Mandarin. They have a specific educational goal for each student. Their emphasis is on educating each student to be able to pass and get good marks for the university entrance examination.

很累却要保持清醒（9-12月新题）

1.What kind of people lack sleep?

I think most people suffer from lack of sleep, at least most people between the ages of 12 and 60! People are putting in long hours to get their work done, dealing with stress, and trying to balance work and home. When time is short, sleep is often cut short too. Additionally, the worry associated with this stress often disrupts a person’s sleep and make it not as refreshing as it should be. Students put a great deal of time into their studies for exams and are worrying about their future choices. Adults also deal with deadlines and usually work long hours. The stress of balancing work and family life also interferes with both the amount of time set aside for sleep and quality of sleep. It is a difficult cycle for people to deal with.

2.Why do people feel tired a lot nowadays?

I think people feel tired because sleep is the first thing people sacrifice when they “run out of time”. As I said in the last question, people have a lot of responsibilities by studying and working a lot of hours, along with the stress of trying to balance life and work. Everything seems to be a priority except sleep. While learning and using time management skills won’t cure the problem all of the time for everyone, I think using good time management skills will help people focus to be able to get more done and allow them to prioritize sleep as part a healthy routine!

3.How do people keep awake when they are tired?

I think I know all the tricks to stay awake when I am tired. Drinking caffeinated drinks is usually the first thing I try. Turning lights on brighter around me helps trick my mind into thinking it is really isn't as late as it is. Sometimes a few minutes of activity will clear my head like a brisk walk. Splashing cold water on my face and wrists can help me be more alert. My last trick is to take several deep breaths to get oxygen flowing and this is more effective if I stretch with the breathing. There are lots of ways to try to stay awake when you are tired.

4. What occasions do people need to keep awake even though they feel tired?

There are many occasions that people need to keep awake no matter how tired they are. I divide them into ‘urgent’, ‘important’, and ‘should’ occasions. Staying awake while driving is an urgent situation and if you can't stay awake, it is important to stop until you can. There are many important occasions that it is better to be awake, but isn't a “life or death” situation like driving. For example, staying awake in class is important for obvious reasons. A “should” occasion example is when my family went to a play last month. My father fell asleep and my mother was so angry. It definitely would have been better for him if stayed awake! I think we can all think of many occasions where we struggled to stay alert!

花很长时间准备的礼物（9-12月新题）

1. How do people usually choose gifts?

Gifts are meant to make other people happy. So, people usually give a great deal of thought about the type of occasion, what others want, and about what they can afford to spend before choosing a gift! These things don't always align, so often there is a lot to think about. For occasions like a young child's birthday party, a small, fun gift like an inexpensive toy is very appropriate and delights the child receiving it. Other times, giving money is the best option. This way the people receiving the gift can decide what they want for themselves, for instance for a wedding or house warming gift. If a person is financially well-off and does not want or need anything, often the best idea is to give a hand-made gift. These will provide the sentimental value that will make the recipient happy.

2. Why do some people find it hard to choose gifts?

Some people really struggle choosing a gift because they want to give the perfect gift that will make the recipient happy and feel special. A gift doesn't have to be expensive to be appreciated and well-received, however the choice of a gift is also a reflection on the giver. If someone chooses a gift without putting any thought into it, the recipient will know that and will be disappointed. Also, there are so many choices when buying a gift and being able to buy things on-line offers even more options to choose from. Sometimes it's just hard to make a decision and settle on that perfect gift!

3. Do you think useful gifts are always more suitable than those useless ones?

Sometimes I think getting a frivolous gift is fun, but in general, I think useful gifts are much better to give and receive. For example, suppose a teenage girl gets an oversized stuffed animal and a bag for her 16th birthday. It lightens everyone's mood when she unwraps the stuffed animal and everyone says it is “cute”. However, it isn't a very practical gift and will probably be thrown out and forgotten very soon. On the other hand, the bag is something she will use and enjoy repeatedly. A practical and useful gift will be a longer lasting memento of the occasion.

4. Do people give the same gifts as they did in the past?

I don't think so. There are a variety of new choices of gifts to give because of advances in electronics and the ability to buy things from the internet. Nowadays, everyone wants the latest models of electronics, like cell phones, tablets, or wireless accessories. It makes for many new choices! My mother just purchased a tablet for my grandmother. It has the same functionality as a cell phone, but she is able to see screen better. This would never have been a possibility a generation ago! However, gifts in the past were limited to what could be made or purchased locally. I think that is the difference. Besides, giving money for certain occasions has been customary for a long time and continues to be appropriate.

借过的好用东西（9-12月新题）

1. What kind of things do people borrow from each other?

I think of small things that people borrow because they need or want them for a short period of time. I have some books that I am happy to let friends borrow. My friend and I are the same size and we will sometimes share clothes. My father needed a tool to change a light fixture and borrowed it from a neighbor. Last month, I forgot money for lunch as school and my teacher saw that I wasn't eating and loaned me money for food. I was sure to pay her back the next day. I am uncomfortable borrowing money, even in small amounts! People usually avoid borrowing expensive things, like computers, because you are responsible for it and would feel terrible if it broke while you had it.

2. What are the things that people do not choose to lend to others?

Like I said in my last answer, people don't really like to loan money or expensive items. If you loan someone money and they can not pay you back like you had agreed, the relationship will become strained and even ruined. Other things that people don't like to lend are expensive things like electronics or sentimental items like family heirlooms. If something happened to them while they were in the possession of someone else, they could be expensive or even impossible to repair. Not that anyone would be purposely careless, but things happen in life. If I loaned my laptop to my best friend, I know she would do her best to take care of it, but she accidentally dropped it, I know I would feel resentful because of the inconvenience it would cause me.

3. Do we always need to get permissions from others before using something they have?

Yes, we should always get permission from others before using their possessions. If you don't, that is stealing! That is a point I keep trying to tell my younger brother who thinks nothing of coming into my room and "borrowing" my things. He has borrowed my tennis racket, my electronics, and even music from my music collection without asking. It would not be so bad if I didn't have to go into his room to get them back! Of course, I would lend these items to him, but if he would ask first, I would know where these items were so I wouldn't be looking for them thinking that I misplaced them!

4. What do you think of copying ideas from others?

This is a difficult question because I think that someone can take a good idea and make it even better. However, I think credit has to be given to the person who thought of the idea to begin with. Then the question comes up, what if this person doesn't want you to use their idea. If you can't convince him or her to work with you on it, then I think it is better to try to find your own creative thoughts around the idea to come up with your own work. Ideas can always be improved on and that's what helps science growing and expanding. It is important to share ideas, but I don't think copying them is fair.

喜欢的天空（9-12月新题）

1. Should kids know more about stars and planets?

Kids should learn about the stars and planets. This is a science that has been studied since ancient times. So much is known about space and there is so much more to learn. While most kids no longer need to know how to navigate the ocean by the stars, it is fascinating to notice how the stars “change” in the sky depending on the time and season. This allows students to know more about the Earth’s rotation and our position in the universe. The advances used in the study of space have helped many other areas of science and is beneficial for everyone!

2. Is high technology helpful for star watching?

Star watching can be done with everything from the naked eye on a particularly dark night to a very expensive telescope. A lot can be learned by looking at the night skies with only your eyes and matching them with images of the constellations. It is easy and inexpensive to learn the location and names of prominent stars this way. However, there is inexpensive technology that can be very helpful too. There are apps that you can download on your phone and as you position your phone in a certain direction, it will identify what you are looking at for you. Nowadays, technology makes stars and planets accessible to everyone.

3. What kind of people are interested in stars?

I think people who are interested in the stars are filled with curiosity about things they can’t touch and feel. There is so little known about the stars, people use their curiosity and imagination to fuel their interest in learning more. Most of these people are just so impressed with the immense majesty of the stars and planets that they enjoy sky watching! Some people make star watching more of a hobby. They may buy an inexpensive telescope and go to remote areas on weekends and look for specific astronomical events. Still others want to know the answers to questions about space and everything in it and study stars in earnest!

4. Why do some people like to watch movies about stars or planets?

Many people enjoy movies about stars or planets because they can spark your imagination. There is a genre called “science fiction” and many of these movies are about people going to other planets and exploring. Often, they are learning about how to live in that planet’s atmosphere and sometimes they interact with alien life who look very different from us. The more modern movies about stars or planets have brilliant video effects about space travel that capture your interest. These are things no one would ever see on earth, and even though it is just fiction, it can be fun to imagine going to other planets!

读书写字的地方（9-12月新题）

1. What do you think is more important? Reading or writing?

This is not an easy question at all because both are important, but I think the ability to read is more important than writing because it needs to be learned first. If a person reads enough different material, they will naturally develop into a good writer. They will become familiar with vocabulary and different sentence structures through their reading and will use these in their writing. Reading allows people to understand what ideas other people are trying to communicate. This allows people to learn through their reading. However, people who do not write well can try to get their thoughts and ideas across to others through speech and, perhaps, even art!

2. Who needs to have good writing skills?

It is so important for everyone to be able to write; it will be hard to narrow down to specific groups of people! News and magazine writers need to be able to write concisely, without personal bias, so people will know and understand the events happening in the world. It may be especially important for people who work in scientific fields like medicine, so there is clarity when it comes to medical advances and patient care. The ability to write is important for people in the legal profession so that laws are written without ambiguity and are easy to interpret. I think anyone in authority should have good writing skills so that their thoughts are expressed clearly.

3. At what age should children start to read?

I think children should not be forced to read too young because then they may get frustrated and not want to learn. Some children who are read to frequently in the home develop an interest in reading early, but most children are ready to start when they are in kindergarten usually by age 5. Children can learn simple characters and will soon be able to expand on that. While young children may not have the manual coordination to write characters yet, they usually take pride in identifying them. So, I think child should start to read at the age of around 5.

4. Where can people get more information from, words or pictures?

There is a saying that “a picture can say a thousand words”. Well, I don’t believe that! While an illustration or picture can help place emphasis on what an idea is, words are much more specific and explicit in getting the information across to people. Sometimes words don’t keep the reader’s interest, so they do not grasp the main idea. But I think that if something is well written, there is less room for interpretation of what the author is trying to communicate.

无聊经历（9-12月新题）

1. Why do people get bored?

People get bored for different reasons, some are physical and some are mental. Some people who get bored easily are people who are lacking healthy nutrition or rest. The physical part of a person certainly affects the mental and emotional parts! Other people get bored because they have been in the same daily routine for a long time, lack choices in their recreational activities, and perhaps even have a low level of mental stimulation. Many people find it hard to break out of a boring routine and try a new hobby or meet new people, even though this would provide the type of mental stimulation that would be helpful for them.

2. Why are people less interested in reading books nowadays?

Books take a long time to read and people don’t have the time to dedicate to reading for enjoyment like they did before. Students and working adults have a lot of time commitments and less free time. Printed books seem to be replaced by ebooks because they are more convenient to have with you. If people do have an interest in books, sometimes they will listen to an audio book or ebook while they are doing something else, like working out at the gym or while they are on public transportation.

3. Are all the boring jobs going to be done by robots in the future?

Most industries are going to become more automated in the future. People have already found robots are taking over more and more of the routine tasks that are part of a job. But it is important to realize that while many of the routine tasks are going to be done by robots, AI cannot provide the type of individual critical thinking skills required for many jobs. The question is: what is a boring job? Some people think that child care can be boring. Would a robot ever replace a human being in a nursery? I hope not! Many people in the sales field have repetitive jobs. It also can very repetitive, but they could never be replaced by a robot because of the required critical thinking skills. I think there will be jobs that will not be done by robots.

4. Why do some people choose boring jobs?

There are times when choosing a boring job is not necessarily a poor choice. Not all boring jobs are low-paying. Some people choose to do jobs they find boring because they are making enough money to make a good living and support their families. My college-aged cousin works as a landscaper during summer vacation. He doesn't particularly like the work, but it pays well and it helps him pay for his college expenses. Others choose boring jobs because they save their energy for activities outside of their work day. My neighbor has two school aged children and she works in a retail job so she can earn a some money, but still get her kids ready for school in the morning and be home for them when they get home. It is a personal choice.

擅长工作的人（9-12月新题）

1. How should young people perform on their first jobs?

It is extremely important for young people to perform well on their first jobs. It is vital to carry out all of the responsibilities of their job to the very best of their abilities! This will show they are hard-working, dedicated to the company, and eager to take on new responsibilities. They will probably need to put extra time into their jobs to learn as much as they can about the job and company. This knowledge and increased skill set will help them as they advance in their career. Doing these things will help young people perform well on their first job and will be the foundation for a good career.

2. How can people improve their job performance?

As I mentioned before, it is important for people to learn all of the responsibilities of their job and to do them competently and with enthusiasm! It is important to be organized so that none of their responsibilities are overlooked which would reflect very badly on them! Putting in extra hours at the workplace will help employees develop this organization, especially when people are just starting their job. Something else that is sometimes overlooked is the ability to get along with others. It is important to develop good relationships with supervisors and co-workers because they are excellent sources of information and help if you need it.

3. What skill set should a manager have?

Managers should have a variety of skills to be successful because they need to be able to lead people to successfully complete their responsibilities in a fair and timely manner. It is a big job and in order to do this, a manager must be very observant, organized, and detailed oriented in order to meet deadlines. Managers also need to understand the job functions within the department so they can recognize if there is a problem and respond to it proactively. A manager can also look at the work flow and make suggestions to improve productivity or cost savings for the company. This is where the ability to problem-solve is very important!

4. Do you think what you have learned in university is going to help in your future job?

I definitely feel what I learned in university will help me be successful in my future job. I feel fortunate that my education included many things that will help me be organized and productive. My coursework in finance and languages will certainly help me in the international business world, but the technology courses have given me a strong background to be effective in my job. This education and experience have broadened my understanding of the expectations in the workforce and I feel I am ready to be productive and successful!

特别的一天（9-12月新题）

1. Do people spend too much money on their birthday parties or weddings?

Birthday parties and weddings are very special events and most people do spend too much money on them. On the other hand, if people want to spend an excessive amount of money on a party or wedding because it brings them joy, and they have the money to do so, they should! However, for most ordinary people, it is important not to spend more than you can afford. People should not go heavily into debt to pay for that special party because they may find they can't do the things they want to do in the future. After all, what is more important, a wedding or a down payment on a home!

2. How much do you think people should spend on their birthday parties or weddings?

How much people should spend depends on how much money a family has saved and earns in a year. I think that people should not spend more on a birthday party than they can afford without going into any debt and with enough money left over to pay for their living expenses after! Weddings are more of an occasion than birthday parties because weddings are lifetime memories for the bride and groom and their families. However, often society puts pressure on people to have a more expensive wedding than the family can really afford.

3. Which is the better way to retain memories, by videos or photos?

Both are great ways to retain memories, but I think photos are a better way to retain memories because they are more convenient to display and accessible to show others. I can frame a photo and place it on a piece of furniture. Every time I walk by it, I will remember the experience. I can make a collage of photos and place them on the wall by my front door. When people come in and see them, they will see photos of this special memory. If my friends ask about a recent event, I can show them a quick picture on my cell phone rather than expect them to politely sit through a longer video.

4. How can forgetful people remember things better?

Forgetful people have to work to organize themselves to remember things. One way is to write things down on a calendar. If they use a cell phone calendar, they can set it so that it gives them audio reminders when they need to do things and for appointments! If they use a printed calendar, they have to make sure they look at it every day. Some forgetful people will use a task list where they will write down tasks that they have to do and check them off as they complete them. These can all be part of a time management system. Of course, they only work if the forgetful person remembers to do them!

与陌生人的对话（9-12月新题）

1. What is the difference between face to face conversation and phone conversation?

Face to face conversations are nice because you can see the person you are talking with. So much of communication is unspoken, seeing someone's facial expressions and body language as you talk can add so much to the discussion. Phone conversations tend to be faster and are often considered more convenient for that reason. Another difference is that phone conversations seem to be getting replaced by texts. But face to face conversations seem to be getting more popular, especially with apps like WeChat where face to face conversations can occur electronically!

2. Which one do you prefer, face to face conversation or phone conversation?

I prefer face to face conversations to phone conversations. I like to see the person I am speaking with.

When I ask, “How are you feeling?”, I can see with my eyes if the person is telling the truth or just being polite. It is easier to express emotions face to face. I can use facial expressions as cues whether to pursue the conversation or change the subject. By reading body language, it is easy to tell if a person is busy and only has a few minutes to talk, so there aren’t awkward delays trying to find a way to end the conversation. Also, there are far less distractions face to face, and therefore, the interaction you have is more meaningful than by phone.

3. Are there any disadvantages of face to face conversation?

There are a few disadvantages to face to face conversations. The biggest disadvantage is you must maintain your appearance for a face to face conversation! I can speak to someone on the phone while wearing my favorite fuzzy bathrobe and comfortable slippers with unbrushed hair, but that would be totally inappropriate for most, if not all, face to face conversations! Another disadvantage is if the listener is inattentive. The speaker can feel hurt that he or she is not getting the expected amount of attention. Often, then the speaker then starts into a awkward monologue until the meeting can be ended.

地区特产（9-12月新题）

1. What food is popular throughout the world?

I think one of the most popular foods throughout the world is eggs. Eggs are such a versatile food. They can be scrambled, fried, poached, boiled. So much can be made with them and they can be seasoned in so many ways and eaten at every meal. In France, eggs are beaten until they are very fluffy and baked to make a breakfast soufflé. In Mexico, they have a famous dessert called a flan. The eggs are lightly beaten with milk, sweetened with sugar, and baked. It tastes similar to a custard. People eat different types of eggs. While chicken eggs are the most popular, many dishes can be made out of duck eggs, quail eggs, and even ostrich eggs!

2. Why do people use imported products?

People use imported products to supplement their own locally grown and produced products. For instance, bananas and many citrus fruits only grow in tropical climates. If you happen to live in an Arid climate, the only way to enjoy these fruits is to import them. Imported food is different from what we are used to eating and is interesting to taste. As an example, imported food products are practical if people are cooking an international cuisine when there are no substitutes locally for that ingredient, for instance, using a spice from India. Often, people will buy an imported product because it is considered “the best” from that country, for example Cuban cigars are recognized world-wide for their quality.

3. Why do people living in different regions like different food?

People grow up eating in a way similar to how their parents ate when they were growing up. Their tastes develop a liking for that kind of food from a very young age. The food most people eat is what is available locally because local food is usually fresher and less expensive. If someone is born and raised in a tropical climate, their tastes may more naturally gravitate to tropical fruits. However, if a person is born and raised in a very cold climate, the flavor of tropical fruits will seem very foreign and it will probably take some time to develop a fondness for that type of food.

4. Do different places have their own popular products?

Absolutely. This is because different places have their own locally grown products that have been farmed and produced in their area for generations. The local people are very familiar with their own local products and know how to produce them in the best and most delicious ways. They just have more experience with their own local products. Once people outside of the area realize this how delicious these products are, they want these products to be available to them also!

1. What are the advantages and disadvantages of taking photos with smartphones?

It seems that everyone carries a smartphone with them all of the time, so it is very convenient to take a photo with it when a “photo opportunity” comes up! You don’t need to carry a separate camera. The photos are stored digitally on your smartphone and can easily be shared with others via social media. Most smartphones have apps which allows you to add special effects and edit right there on the phone! A disadvantage is of course, a smart phone is not as good as a camera. The photo will not look as professional as one taken with a camera. The camera has better picture quality and has manual control of features that make the photograph a better quality.

2. Do you think photographers are artists?

Some photographers are artists; others are people who like to take pictures. A true artist will take photographs that elicits an emotion from the person viewing it. Perhaps a photographer will take beautiful landscape pictures or capture feelings of the people who are subjects in the photo. Some photographers will work with special effects like filters to enhance colors which creates more interest when viewing their work. Some work with time exposures to capture the movement or growth of an object over time. These people are artists. Then there are photographers like me. I just like to take pictures for the memories and because it is fun!

3. What are the benefits of learning painting for children?

Children love to paint and it can be very beneficial for them. Young children can learn their colors, basic shapes, and patterns through painting. They learn about mixing colors. It also helps them develop their fine motor skills and eye-hand coordination. As they get a bit older, they develop some decision-making skills as they decide what to paint and what colors to use for different parts of the painting. Some children are able to express their emotions through painting and use of color.

4. Can anyone become a famous artist through hard work?

No, I don’t think just anyone can become a famous artist, even with hard work. Everyone can improve on their skills through hard work to become proficient. However, a person has to be born with certain inherent abilities and then, with a lot of hard work and some luck, they might become famous. These natural abilities include an inclination to being observant, as well ability to see depth and color nuances at a young age. Artists also have imagination and strive to have others see through their eyes. Even people who are born with these abilities still have to have the interest and determination to work to become that special artist.

童年的玩具（9-12月新题）

1. How do advertisements influence children?

Advertising has a great effect on children. On one hand, advertisements give children more opportunities to know more about the world and see many new and interesting products and innovations. These cannot be learned in schools and parents. On the other hand, some advertisements may induce children, which is not conducive to children’s growth in a right way. It’s terrible that a child might want to try drinking because he saw a beer advertisement. Therefore, the influence of advertising on children is good or bad, parents should pay attention to distinguishing.

2. Should advertising aimed at kids be prohibited?

I think that we do not need to prohibit the advertisement aimed at kids. It is too absolute, but it should be controlled and guided. From a child's point of view, children lack experience and judgment, sometimes they cannot understand the difference between TV advertisements and their favorite animated cartoons. Children's inappropriate behavior, for example, violence, addiction to games, ignorance of teachers should not appear in advertisements. Some special advertisements, such as tobacco and alcohol, should avoid to use children's image. As long as the guidance is strengthened, the adverse effects can be minimized.

3. Do you think parents should buy more toys for their kids or spend more time with them?

There is no doubt that parental companionship is better for children than anything else. Children are always fond of the new stuff. They easily get fed up with the new toys which were bought by their parents a few days ago. Obviously, parents cannot just keep buying new toys to their children. On the contrary, only the accompanying parents can make the children grow up healthily. For example, playing with the same toys with their parents, children can have more fun and interest than playing alone by themselves. Besides parents can teach their children some basic principles while they are playing together. Children need to communicate with their parents than playing alone with toys only.

4. What is the difference between the toys kids play now and those they played in the past?

Because of the underdeveloped technology, children used to play with some traditional toys and games in the past. Boys liked to play with plastic pistols, while girls played with dolls. Or they play hide-and-seek games together. All these games and toys were free or at a low price. However, for today's children, they start to play with mobile phones and ipads when they are little. For example, toys are also electrified or can talk. They play electric games on ipads instead of playing outdoor activities with friends. Most of their electric games and toys are expensive. The development of science and technology makes children's toys and games more and more advanced nowadays.

选工作或专业的建议（9-12月新题）

1. Why do so many young people choose communication and media studies as their major?

On one hand, communication and media require lower scores, which is a shortcut to a good university for many students. This means they have more opportunities to choose their favorable schools with the scores they got in the College Entrance Exam. On the other hand, many students really like this profession. They like to show themselves in front of the camera, or even become behind-the-scenes record or production. They want to spread what they have seen and what they have heard to the other people. This helps a lot of people see the world without leaving home. I have a good friend who is major in hosting and broadcasting. I think it's a great major.

2. Why do young people find it hard to make career choices?

Most young people don't know what jobs they like or are suitable for them at the beginning. Firstly it is because they don't know what their own strengths are. For example, if you know you are good at Math and interested in logic and reasoning, you are sure that Math-related field will be your future career choice. Secondly young people lack the opportunity and courage to try anything unknown. So they need to take part in more internships during their colleges. From sophomore year, they can visit different industries and workplaces in order to see and understand what these careers are related to. This helps them to understand what exactly they will work on in the near future if they choose these careers in the real society.

3. What can affect the career choices of young people?

I think there are many factors influencing the career choices of young people. Firstly, the salary must be the most important factor. After all, the income from work directly affects people's enthusiasm for work after entering the society. Secondly, family opinions can also influence people's choices for their careers. For example, many children want to work in the government organizations because their parents like them to have stable jobs. The third, it is personal interest. Some young people would like to choose their jobs according to their hobbies. They do not mind what salary is, they only do whatever they are fascinated in. In general, young people's career choice is a comprehensive consideration in many aspects.

4. Can people have free choices of their jobs?

I don't think so. In today's China, many people can't have free choices of their jobs. Most people think that government officials and teachers are the best professions in China's job markets. Practically, people have to ensure what they earn can afford to what they spend. Especially, to be independent for living is the priority for most of the young people after they graduated from their university. So they cannot choose their dream jobs only according to their interest. Besides, there are a lot of limitations when people want to choose their favorable jobs. For example, the social connections, the majors, the job opportunities and even the situation of the economy in China are all the factors they might encounter.

不用工作学习的一天（9-12月新题）

1. Do people have more free time than those in the past?

I think with the development of society, people have less and less free time nowadays. We have a lot of new innovations and applications to learn and to use. As a student, I am aware of the stress I have at school and after school. For example, I often go to my tutorial classes in my spare time. Even if I stay in the dormitory, I have to finish the homework and projects assigned by the teacher. There is very little leisure time that I could enjoy after school. Some of my friends who are three years older than me. They have already got the jobs. They told me that they often work overtime, from 9am to 9 pm, and 6 days a week.

2. What's the difference between the things people did in their free time in the past and the things they do nowadays??

When I was little, my parents had a lot of free time because they hardly needed to work overtime. My mom used to cook for all of us every day. During week days, my parents often took me to the park for a little walk after dinner. Generally people have a lot of free time to accompany their families or do what they like. However, nowadays people are too busy for their work every day. They have much less free time. More and more work load and pressure, they had to work overtime more often than before. So they seldom cook at home, but order meals online after work.

3. What do people like to do when they are free in your country?

People at different ages have different hobbies. For students, we prefer to hanging out for shopping, eating or singing at KTV when we have free time after school. It's boring for us to stay at home at our spare time. But for those who need to go to work from 9am to 5pm, or sometimes overtime working until 9pm, they're too tired after work. For example, my sister likes to stay at home, listen to music or play games on weekends. She often refuses to go out for dinner but orders her meals online . For office workers, weekends are a rare free time for them to be relaxed.

4. Do you think most people are able to manage their free time well?

Most people can't manage their time well, so success can only belong to a few people. I think good time management can greatly improve the efficiency of work, thus people get more free time in return. For sure, this requires great self-discipline. In addition, doing exercises, reading or singing are some of the good activities for people to do at their spare time. However, many people just complain that they are too busy at work , but spend all their free time on playing games and cell phones every day and night.

庆祝成就（9-12月新题）

1. How do Chinese people celebrate their family events? Is there anything different from other countries?

Eating out and drinking are two typical and traditional ways that Chinese people celebrate our family events. Eating and drinking can satisfy all the social interaction of Chinese people, including celebration, business, dating and so on. Chinese people like drinking, but they are different from other countries. Most Westerners celebrate that they like red wine and beer while Chinese people like white wine. And we do not have very strict table manners. We like to sit around, chat and laugh loudly in public or at home with our families. We do enjoy the happiness and excitement sharing with our family members in this way. Compared with other countries, Chinese celebrations are very distinctive.

2. Why is it important for sports fans to celebrate when their favourite team wins?

I think that the favorite team for sports fans is normally their own city, or country team. When their favorite team wins, the fans will have a sense of honor. This is just like the Chinese will spontaneously support the Chinese National Team. When the Chinese team defeats the teams of other countries, I will certainly be proud that I am a Chinese. Besides sports fans have their own idol players in their favorite teams. They are fascinated to the sport stars, thus they would like to celebrate with their heroes together after the games. It is the way for them to express their love and excitement with the sport stars and their favorable teams.

3. Do people prefer winning in a team or on their own?

This varies from person to person. I think most Chinese like teamwork. In Chinese culture, cooperation has always been respected. But for me, I prefer to my personal victory. Team work is important, but good team members are not easy to find. And it takes a long time to form a well-cooperated team according to my own experience. Thus to me, my own success can build up my leadership ability. I can be aware of my own weakness in the competition with others. This makes myself better and stronger in the future competitions and challenges

4. How are birthday celebrations different between young and old?

Young people often value their birthdays. They like to have birthday parties with families and friends to celebrate together. They love to exchange their presents at the parties. For young people, birthdays mean growth, and they think birthdays are the milestones in their life. For the old generation, like my parents, they don't like to celebrate their birthdays. It might because they have a lot of birthday celebrations when they were young. Now while getting older and older, they just want to forget their ages. In addition, the old generation don't care whether birthday gifts are expensive or not. Even if they have only got a birthday card, they are very happy and satisfied.

想和朋友分享的电影（9-12月新题）

1. What kind of film is popular?

I think comedy is more and more popular in China. First of all, comedy is suitable for people at any ages to watch, especially for the whole family to watch it together on holidays. But horror movies or science fiction movies have their limitations. Secondly, a lot of people work under great pressure at work and life, nowadays. It is a good way to decompress them by watching a comedy together on weekends. What's more, many comedies nowadays actually contain some truth and reality. People can understand what the movies and the director exactly tell them after they laugh. This makes more and more people like to watch comedy in today's China.

2. What kind of film do young people like to watch?

I think young people would like to watch love movies and science fiction movies. On one hand, each boy has a science fiction dream in his mind. Normally boys have better imagination, and they like unknown, science fiction and mechanical elements. So basically every boy would like to watch science fiction. On the other hand, girls may like to watch love and family movies. Since girls are more delicate, they would like to see the family movies and romantic love movies. Mostly they prefer to the happy ending for the movies.

3. Do fewer people choose to watch movies in cinema than people did in the past?

I think fewer people choose to watch movies in cinema now. First of all, that is because the home audio-visual equipment is very effective now. While the size of the TV is getting bigger and bigger, and its sound is getting better and better. The feeling and the experience of watching movies at home is getting similar with that in the cinema. In addition, many movies are now available on the Internet after they are broadcast in the cinema, and the price is not expensive. People can choose the time for watching. So instead of going out to the cinema, people would like to lie down at home and watch the movies in a sofa.

4. Do you think cinemas will disappear in the future?

I don't think so. Firstly, although the home audio-visual equipment is becoming more and more advanced, it is still not comparable to the professional equipment of the cinema. For example, disaster movies and science fiction movies rely heavily on 3D special effects, and the feeling and experience of watching such movies in cinemas is much better than that of watching movies at home. Secondly, watching movies at home, people are much easier to be interfered. Family members or phone calls will interfere them with concentration on watching movies. And people in cinemas are relatively orderly. They are all required to turn off their mobile phones and keep quiet. In general, going to the cinema is a social activity, especially for lovers and couples.

家庭休闲活动（9-12月新题）

1. What leisure activities are popular in China?

There are so many leisure activities that people can enjoy in China, it is hard to name them all. People of all ages enjoy public dancing. You don't have to be a good dancer to join in. Dancers of all abilities are welcome. It is a wonderful way to enjoy the music and movement with friends and to meet new people! Playing Mahjong and walking in the park are also popular activities that people young and old enjoy. Some people enjoy keeping pets and will walk them in the park. None of these activities necessarily cost a lot money, but they bring people together so they can unwind from their stress while enjoying good company of others and being outdoors.

2. What leisure activities do young people like?

Young people tend to like more active leisure activities. Public dancing is active and certainly is popular, but so are activities like badminton and table tennis. There are plenty of opportunities to play in the parks, but also at the local community center or in recreational leagues. There are always people available to play! Young people also like to go out with small groups of friends to do KTV on a weekend evening. It is a fun way to unwind after a long week of work or classes. Video games are also popular with young people, and while it isn't very active, many find it a way to escape from daily pressures. I think video games are popular because if someone is in the mood to be alone or doesn't have a lot of time, playing a video game for 30 minutes can be a good way to relax.

3. Do leisure activities have to be educational?

Leisure activities don't have to be educational, but they can be. My brother belongs to a chess club and he certainly has learned more about strategy and competition from being part of that. But I think that enjoying leisure activities benefits people in other ways that are equally important. Walking and dancing are great ways for people of all ages to be physically active which is good for their health, helps relieve stress, and improves the overall well-being of each individual because it keeps people socially active. Playing mahjong keeps people mentally engaged and socially active which is also good for people.

4. Do men and women like different leisure activities?

Men and women can enjoy the same leisure activities, but often they have others that they prefer on their own. Both men and women seem to equally enjoy activities like public dancing, walking in the park, KTV, badminton, etc. But when I am in the park, I notice more men play jianzi than women. On the other hand, it seems more women enjoy doing some hand crafts like knitting, making lace, or candle making. That doesn't mean that both men and women can't enjoy the same activities, but it seems that sometimes they have less interest.

室内游戏（9-12月新题）

1. What indoor games do children like to play nowadays?

Children seem to be spending a lot of time playing computer games indoors; there are even computer games designed for very young children! I think more and more computer games are considered educational and children have fun while they learn. However, children like to do activities like paint and draw inside too! They can spend hours playing with puzzles, tangrams, and building structures with building blocks like Legos when they are alone. However, kids still enjoy having a friend over and will play card games or even board games like checkers or mancala while they enjoy each other's company.

2. What qualities should a team leader have?

A team leader has to be dedicated to the team goal, be able to communicate well with others, and most of all, have integrity. The team's goals may change over time. It may be more reasonable for a team to have a smaller goal that needs to be achieved in order to reach a higher goal. The team leader has to believe in those goals and communicate them with enthusiasm and by encouraging each individual on the team. Further, the team leader has to have integrity and follow rules themselves while treating everyone else with equal fairness. These qualities will make others want to follow the team leader!

3. Is teamwork important to individuals?

Teamwork is a very important skill for individuals to learn and apply in their lives. Businesses are looking for employees who can work with others to solve problems. Everyone has a different strength. If you put different strengths together, you have a stronger team than if you are working alone. With cooperation between team members, they can solve challenges with more efficiency and confidence! Often, individuals think that their solution is the only solution, and perhaps it is. But if individuals communicate openly and listen to each other, they may find that there are other things that can be added to the original idea that will improve it. Then the team can share responsibilities to divide the workload and make it more achievable in a shorter period of time.

4. What do you think of people spending too much time playing computer games?

I think spending too much time playing computer games is a waste of what could otherwise be productive time! I am not saying that playing computer games to relax is a bad thing, but the time has to be monitored. Nothing of real value is achieved by playing five hours of computer games. What could people do with four of those five hours that might be better for them mentally or physically? Perhaps they could be outside hiking which is better for their physical well-being. Maybe they could be meeting with friends and enjoy the social interaction. Perhaps they could be helping a neighbour, which is satisfying to do and good for the community! So many choices for people unless they waste that time!

新建公共设施

1. What measures should be taken to deal with damage on public facilities?

Damage of public facilities is an issue which affects a whole community. Public facilities are the resources of the public and are very important for improving the wellbeing of people's lives. So this matter must be taken quite seriously. Damages should be repaired and fixed as soon as possible, ensuring the restorations (修复) are done to a high degree. I believe our older generations show a lot of respect for public facilities as they still respect the sense of community we should share. However, many young people do not see the importance of public facilities and would not give as much care to their maintenance and restoration as they should do.

2. What are the differences between old facilities and new facilities?

There are many differences between old and new facilities and people often have very strong opinions on which they prefer. Old facilities are often very beautiful architecture and carry a sense of antiquity (古代) which feels important or beautiful to people. However, this is not always the case and sometimes old buildings are simply dilapidated and deteriorating (破旧的和持续恶化). In contrast, new facilities can also have very sleek and beautiful architecture but of a more modern style. The main advantage of new facilities is they often offer new technologies and devices, such as high-quality heating or air conditioning.

3. What facilities do young people and old people like in your country?

I believe the old people in my country have a lot of respect for the traditional facilities which are sadly becoming less popular in the modern world. For example, I think old people still really appreciate libraries and consider them as fantastic public facilities for the community. I do not think this opinion is as common in younger people, however, there are public facilities they still really value. For example, youth centres (儿童活动中心) are often very important facilities for young people who come from poorer neighbourhoods. Youth centres can be a place where children can safely develop and interact with other people of their age. I think sometimes it is better when facilities are catered (满足) to a specific age group.

4. What's the differences between facilities in the countryside and the ones in the cities?

Facilities in the countryside are often of a smaller than the ones in the city. If we take libraries as an example, it is the case that a library in the countryside will have a small and specific collection of books while in the city there will be a vast catalogue of different literature to be accessed. These differences are purely to do with the population differences between the cities and the countryside. As there is a far denser (密集的) population of people in the city often the facilities are given more funding (资助) so they can support the larger and vaster array of people.

蒙骗的经历

1. Why do people lie sometimes?

I think people lie when they are scared of telling the truth. There are many reasons why someone can be scared of telling the truth, sometimes the reasons are good and sometimes they are bad. For example, there are bad people who will lie because they are scared of the consequences they will suffer if they tell the truth. This is lying for selfish reasons and it is harmful and inexcusable (不可原谅的). However, sometimes people will lie to spare the feelings of others, this is lying for empathetic (善解人意的) reasons and I believe this can sometimes be justified (合理的). Attitudes towards lying vary a lot dependant on your age and personal experience, so everyone's opinions on the matter are different.

2. How would you define white lies?

White lies (善意的谎言) are lies which are not harmful to anyone. Some deception (欺骗) can often cause a person pain, lying to someone may cause them to make wrong choices and bad decisions which are harmful to them. However, sometimes lies can be protective, and prevent someone from discovering something that they do not need to know and will cause them pain. Often it is parents who tell their children white lies to protect them from discovering things they are not mature enough yet to understand. I think this is a very common practice in the western world. In China we are slightly more honest with our children, however, there are still moments were we also tell white lies.

3. Do you think it's important to teach children to be honest?

Honesty is a very important thing to teach children. Honesty is important because without honesty it is difficult for a person to develop deep and meaningful relationships with others. Honesty is the source of trust and trust is needed to create strong friendships and relationships. Honesty is a concept that is valued and revered highly throughout society. However, there are some who are worried that younger generations do not value honesty with the same reverence that older generations do. This is a very worrying thing as honesty is crucial to the individual but also important for developing a healthy society as a whole.

4. What are the other ways to teach children about honesty except having parents or teachers teach them?

Children often learn a lot of their lessons from what they watch on TV. This is becoming a more and more common practice amongst younger generations. Before, things such as honesty would be primarily taught by parents and teachers, but nowadays much of children's TV is written to be both educational and informative. There is a good example in the western world where educational children's TV has been popular for a very long time. They have a TV show called Little Pig Peiqi which teaches children many things. It teaches basic skills such as maths and spelling (拼写) but it also offers emotional education, attempting to teach things such as empathy and honesty.

5. Some people say that liars are those who have a good memory, what do you think?

It seems very likely that liars are those who have a good memory. This is because when someone is a liar they not only have to remember the real history of events, they also have to remember all of the lies they have told. This means that they often have to remember two completely different forms of reality and it would require a very good memory. However, this does not mean that their memories are better than the memories of people who do not lie. Honest people may also have very good memories, however, they just use their memories for better things, such as learning.
